

Books About Libraries and Librarians: Thursday Edition

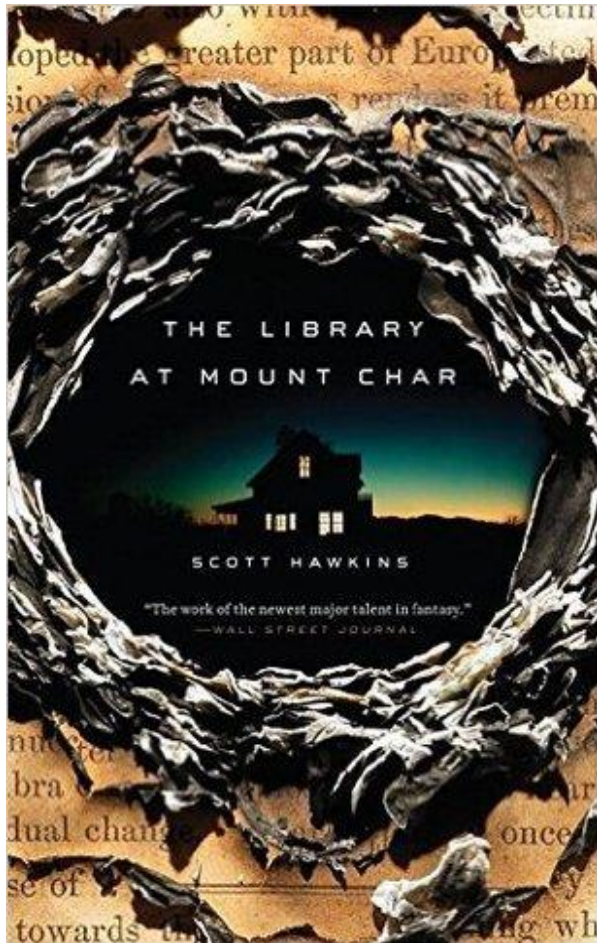

By Sue Gerth

We continue to celebrate libraries and librarians during National Library Week. Here are a few more titles that may interest you—and no list would be complete without this first title:

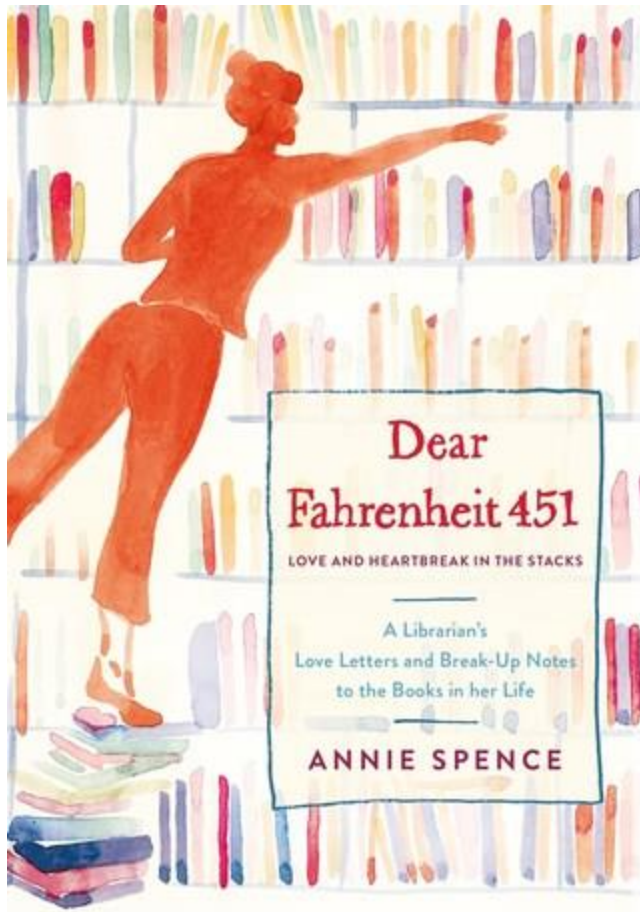

The true story of a beloved cat that called the Spenser, Iowa public library home for 19 years. Have you met Dewey?

Available through Overdrive as an e-book.

Carolyn lives with a group of children raised by a mysterious man they call Father. Is he God? When he dies, who will inherit his library, which may hold the power of Creation? A fascinating fantasy novel with a twist. Available as an audio book via Hoopla.

Librarian Annie Spence writes letters to books she loves, and books she must break up with after disappointment. An ode to books loved, lost, and not liked at all! How does Annie's life experience shape what she reads? Available through Overdrive and Hoopla in audio book.
